The Sonoma County Bovine Vintology
Experimental Community

In 1675, Marielle Triggois, a direct descendent of Joan of Arc, perfected the art of Bovine Vintology (BV), then known as Le Mouvinte - - the wine of the cow. The alchemical recipe for the special grains fed to cows was said to stimulate the lactation of fine red table wines. The secret blend was thought lost for hundreds of years, but recently elements of JohnKo's Questorian Division uncovered the missing texts in the tiny Central French province of Jeandeaux.

Sonoma county in Northern California was chosen as a Beta testing zone for the reintroduction of Wine Producing Cattle (WPC), due primarily to its unique blend of ranching and grape-growing, as well as its open-minded acceptance of positive manipulation of both livestock and produce.

It should be stressed early on that this is not Genetic Modification, but a wholistically based process of tendency alteration. And in the same breath we should note that the results of this foray into early renaissance technology rival the finest vintages on the global market, with an earthy base and a lingering aftertaste specific on the breed utilized, at a price which reflects the direct process of its manufacture.
